INTRODUCTION

India played a significant part in World War One. The normal annual recruitment for the Indian army was 15,000 men, during the course of the war over 800,000 men volunteered for the army and more than 400,000 volunteered for non-combatant roles. In total almost 1.3 million men had volunteered for service by 1918. One million Indian troops served overseas during the war, of these 62,000 died and another 67,000 were wounded.

'Do not think that this is war. This is not war. It is the ending of the world. This is just such a war as was related in the Mahabharata [the Indian epic] about our forefathers', wrote a wounded Indian soldier from a hospital in England on 29 January 1915.

Anonymous Sepoy (Soldier)

The Indian Corps won 13,000 medals for gallantry including 11 Victoria Crosses. Khudadad Khan won the Corps first Victoria Cross. Due to the massive cost of the war, India's economy was pushed to near bankruptcy.

The Research Services team have prepared and posted biographical stories and accounts of events which relate to the actions of Indian servicemen during World War One.

The Helles Memorial is a Commonwealth War Graves Commission war memorial near Sedd el Bahr, in Turkey. It includes an obelisk, which is over 30 meters (98 ft.) high. It is located on the headland at the tip of the Gallipoli peninsula overlooking the Dardanelles. This memorial is the main Commonwealth battle memorial for the whole Gallipoli Campaign, and commemorates the 20,956 Commonwealth servicemen with no known grave who died in the campaign from 1915-1916, during the First World War. There are 1506 Indian Soldiers listed.

We hope you enjoy reading about these amazing people and the terrifying and sometimes awe inspiring events which carried them across the globe to fight against Germany and its allies.

Indian soldiers, Gallipoli and Helles Memorial

Neera Sahni

India made a vital contribution to Allied success in the First World War. The Indian Army grew from some 150,000 in 1914 to nearly 1.4 million by 1918. More than one million served overseas in various locations. They served with distinction in every theatre of war:

- Western Front in France and Belgium
- Aden and Arabia
- East and West Africa
- Gallipoli in Turkey
- Salonika in Greece
- Mesopotamia
- Palestine
- Persia
- Russia
- China

Those who served in the Indian Army and other Indian forces hailed from across Undivided India – including territories that are now in Bangladesh, Nepal and Pakistan. More than half the army was drawn from Punjab, others came from many ethnic groups and classes, including Anglo-Indians, Bengalis, Dogras, Garwhalis, Gurkhas, Jats, Kachins, Mahars, Pathans, Punjabi Muslims, Pathans, Rajputs and Sikhs.

Indians served across all branches of the military from being on the grounds (in the army), at sea (with the navy) and in the fledgling flying services (the airforce). Indians from the overseas diaspora also served in units of other forces including those of New Zealand and Canada. They earned more than 9,200 decorations for bravery including 11 Victoria Crosses.

Gallipoli

Commonwealth and French forces fought the campaign in Gallipoli in an attempt to force Turkey out of the war. This effort was to relieve the deadlock of the Western Front in France and Belgium and to open a supply route to Russia through the Dardanelles and the Black Sea. The Allies landed on the peninsula on 25th-26th April 1915; the 29th Division at Cape Helles in the south and the Australian and New Zealand Corps north of Gaba Tepe on the west coast. Later this area was known as Anzac Cove. Further landings were made at Suvla on 6th August north of Anzac Cove. The climax of the campaign came in early August when simultaneous assaults were launched on all three fronts. However, the difficult terrain and stiff Turkish resistance soon led to the stalemate of trench warfare. From the end of August no further serious action was fought and the lines remained unchanged. The peninsula was successfully evacuated in December and early January 1916.

The Indian forces and United Kingdom forces have their names on the memorial who died in operations throughout the peninsula. There are also panels for those who died or were buried at sea in Gallipoli waters. The Helles Memorial serves the dual function of Commonwealth battle memorial for the whole Gallipoli campaign and place of commemoration for many of those Commonwealth servicemen who died there and have no known grave. There are 20,956 names commemorated on the Memorial, which includes 1,506 names of Indian soldiers.

Apart from Helles Memorial, there are four other Memorials to the Missing at Gallipoli. The Lone Pine, Hill 60, and Chunuk Bair Memorials commemorate Australian and New Zealanders at Anzac. The Twelve Tree Copse Memorial commemorates the New Zealanders at Helles.

Indian Soldiers & Victoria Cross Medals

During the First World War, over 160,000 Indian soldiers served in France.

The Lahore and Meerut infantry divisions of the British Indian Army were selected for service in Europe. In October shortly after they arrived, they were involved in some of the fiercest fighting around Ypres, Belgium. The Indians took heavy losses at the battle. The average Indian battalion had 764 men when it landed in France. By early November the 47 Sikhs had only 385 men fit for duty. One soldier wrote home "this is not war; it is the ending of the world".

Indian soldiers made a significant military contribution on the Western Front but at the end of 1915 the majority of infantry brigades were withdrawn and sent to the Middle East. A small number of the cavalry brigades (who fought as infantry) remained in France for the duration of the war.

The Indians wounded in the trenches at the Western Front were sent back to hospitals in Marseilles, France and England where Indian civilians (including medical personnel, clerks, store keepers and cooks) were also working.

At the beginning of the War, under Captain Evelyn Berkeley Howell's command, a censor office was set up in response to an Indian 'revolutionary' distributing 'subversive' literature. All out-going as well as in-coming letters, both from the front and from the hospitals in England were subject to inspection.

The two Indian infantry divisions were withdrawn from France in December 1915, and sent to Mesopotamia (now Iraq). Two Indian cavalry divisions remained on the Western Front until March 1918, when they were transferred to Palestine to take part in the offensive against the Turks.

By the end of the war in 1918, a total of 47,746 Indians had been reported dead or missing and 65,126 were wounded. Participants from the Indian subcontinent won 13,000 medals, including 12 Victoria Crosses.

In 1914, Khudadad Khan of 129 Duke of Connaught's Own Baluchis became the first Indian to win a Victoria Cross. Other Indian Victoria Cross recipient soldiers are listed below:

1. Khudadad Khan 129th Duke of Connaught's Own Baluchis 1914 First World War Hollebeke, Belgium
2. Darwan Negi 39th Garhwal Rifles 1914 First World War Festubert, France

(Source: Australian War Memorial C01662)*

The following is the list of rations what Indian soldiers were supplied to eat during World War One.

- 1/4 pound meat

(Non-meat eaters received 2 ounces of gur (coarse, unrefined sugar made from sugar cane juice) or sugar or 3 ounces of milk in place of 4 ounces of meat)

- 1/8 pound potatoes
- 1/3 ounce tea
- 1/2 ounce salt
- 1 1/2 pounds atta (flour)
- 4 ounces dhal (dried lentils, peas or beans which have been stripped of their outer hulls and split)
- 2 ounces ghee (clarified butter)
- 1/6 ounce chillies
- 1/6 ounce turmeric

- 1/3 ounce ginger
- 1/6 ounce garlic
- 1 ounce gur

Indian troops' iron rations (emergency supplies issued in case soldiers were cut off from regular rations) consisted of:

- 1 pound biscuit
- 8 ounces gur
- 1 ounce tea
- 6 ounces condensed milk or 2 1/2 ounces dried milk in lieu, when available.

The Indian Mountain Battery and Mule Corps, Gallipoli, 1915

Neera Sahni & Geoff Barker

One of the lesser known facts of the Australian and New Zealand engagement at Gallipoli is that these troops fought alongside a small contingent of soldiers from the Indian Army. Over the course of the Gallipoli campaign General William Birdwood's Anzac force actually included a small contingent of men from the 7th Brigade of the Indian Mountain Artillery and Indian Transport Corps.

When the war broke out Indian troops were among the first to be drafted into action as a part of the British Imperial Forces and by April 1915 had already been tested in the trenches in France and had fought off an attempt by Turkish Forces to take the Suez Canal. In the original plans the 29 Indian Infantry Brigade, garrisoning at the Suez Canal was to have left with the ANZAC troops as reinforcements. But this never eventuated and the troops that landed at ANZAC consisted of the 21 (Kohat) Mountain Battery (raised in 1851) and 26 Mountain

Battery (origins in Golandauze Battalion 1826) made up of 12 small guns, 13 officers, 820 rank and file and over 500 mules.

While the 3rd Australian Infantry Brigade was the first to land on the 25th April it was closely followed by five transports holding the men of the 2nd Brigade and the Indian Mounted Batteries. The objective of this Indian battery was to land and push on to the 400 Plateau in the centre of the covering position where it was to be guarded by a platoon of the 12th Battalion. All three brigades were to be ashore by 8.30 am.

(Source: Charles Bean, The Official History of Australia in the War of 1914-1918, Volume 12, The Story of ANZAC, 11th Edition, 1941, plate 66)

Unfortunately, almost all the boats were landed at the wrong place and amid the chaos that followed, Lieutenant Rupert Rafferty of the 12th Battalion, who was to have escorted the Indian Mounted Battery to the 400 Plateau, was ordered by Colonel Clarke to move to the left to silence a machine gun near the Sphinx. At 10:30 am the 26 was the first of the two Indian Mountain Batteries to land. By an incredible stroke of luck, they were met on the beach by Rafferty's 12th Battalion returning from an encounter at Fisherman's Hut where the original force of 50 was reduced to Rafferty, a sergeant and 16 men. Nevertheless, they marched back up the hills with the guns.

Shallow pits scratched on 25 April by Infantry on Razorback near the Mountain guns. The line lay facing out of the picture with the valley in its rear and some of the distant heights in the possession of the enemy, taken on 25 October 1915.

(Source: Charles Bean, The Official History of Australia in the War of 1914-1918, Volume 1, The Story of ANZAC, 11th Edition, 1941, plate 391)

The small gun wheels, trail and two parts of the barrel were packed on a string of mules and wound their way over the steep scrub-land of the Razorback. It remained here for the rest of the campaign, close to a point on the 400 plateau beneath the crest. Colonel Hobb reported that he thought field guns could be placed on the other side of their position and asked for them to be brought ashore.

By late morning, there were three guns on either side of White's Valley and at noon they opened fire to support the 10th and 11th Battalions on Battleship Hill and Scrubby Knoll. However, the main force of the Turkish Batteries quickly turned upon them silencing the small battery and wounding Captain P. C. Chapman and Jemadar Dulla Icha. Chapman was hit in the forehead and sent to Egypt where he later died.

By 2:25 pm the shrapnel fire from the Turkish artillery was so intense, men were dropping every minute and Kirby who had also been wounded in the head decided to withdraw the battery to shelter. The fire was too deadly to bring up the mules and corpses of the poor animals already filled the valley behind them.

Consequently, he ordered the gun crews to drop part of the equipment and run the guns back off the plateau by hand.

The guns, men and mules were packed up and marched back towards the beach where they were reorganised. When they came into action again towards the end of the afternoon only four of the six guns could be manned and those with difficulty. Kirby who worked until he fainted from loss of blood was sent to a hospital ship, but waking on board the next day he found a boat moored next to the ship and promptly hitched a ride back to the battery onshore.

At 6:00 pm on the eve of the landing the 21st (Kohat) Mountain Battery was finally landed. But as dusk settled into night the artillery on both sides ceased firing due to darkness. Over the course of the evening the ANZAC commanders decided to set up an inner line of defense to which they could fall back if the need arose. This was formed along an inner line of Plugge's Plateau and McLaughlin's Ridge and to enhance these defenses, two guns from each of the Indian Brigades were emplaced on the almost perpendicular edge of the plateau.

On the 1st May 1915, an Indian Transport Corps was landed on the beach between the colorfully named 'Brighton Beach' and 'Hell Spit'. They brought with them light two wheeled mule carts which were used to move the ever growing mountain of engineers stores, barbed wire, timber and tools. It was here with the Indian mule drivers that John Simpson camped along with his famous donkey 'Duffy', and it was the Indians who evacuated his donkey when the troops left in December.

These good relations obviously extended beyond Simpson as on the 9th August 1915, the 'Warrnambool Standard' newspaper reported on

"...the camaraderie and good feeling existing at the Dardanelles between the Australians and the soldiers of the Indian mountain batteries, who fought side by side in the famous landing at Gaba Tepe. The batteries did so well and gallantly that the Australians have metaphorically taken them to their heart. All are the greatest pals imaginable ..."

In October 2018, to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the World War One, Punjab Chief Minister Captain Amarinder Singh visited the historic World War One Helles Memorial in Turkey to pay homage to the Commonwealth soldiers, including 1506 Indians, including the large number of Sikhs killed in the battle, who laid down their lives in the Gallipoli campaign. He was accompanied by Sports Minister, Rana Gurmeet Singh Sodhi, Advocate General, Atul Nanda, his Media Advisor, Raveen Thukral and Advisor, BIS Chahal.

He placed a wreath on behalf of the 'People of Punjab' at the memorial. He also placed flowers at the graves of the Indian soldiers. Helles memorial is a tribute to the 20,956 Commonwealth servicemen with no known grave who died in the campaign that took place during the World War One throughout the peninsula.

The Chief Minister, Amrinder Singh acknowledged the ultimate sacrifice these brave soldiers made, lost their lives during the war and are buried in distant land, far from their home and families.

Apart from soldiers and money, India provided British Army with 1.7 lakh animals, mostly horses, jute for sandbags, ammunition, weaponry including tanks, armored cars, guns, 37 lakh tonnes of supplies of food and clothing.

The New York Times in 1918 wrote:

"The world must pay India in whatever India wants, for without Indian products, there would be greater difficulty in winning the war."
